BRUSH UP ON YOUR PET'S HEALTH

WITH

DENTAL CARE!

Great dental health keeps your pet's entire body healthy

In fact, dental health is so important it can even help keep your pet in your favorite spot, by your side, for years to come. You see, poor dental health affects much more than just your pet's mouth. The mouth is a gateway of sorts to the rest of your pet's body, so any infection there can actually invade the bloodstream and damage internal organs as a result. That's why dental care is one of the best ways you can help keep your best friend healthy over the years.

Chew on this..

85% of cats and dogs over 3
have periodontal or dental disease.

One milligram of dental plaque contains over one trillion bacteria

Dental disease can go undetected and damage vital organs
like the kidneys, liver, or heart.

Yikes, right? But no need to panic, because we have great news: dental disease is treatable and preventable, and it all starts here, with us. Dental disease can be easy to miss at home. Your pet may exhibit some symptoms (like bad breath), but because pets are great at hiding signs of illness and going about their business despite discomfort or illness, you may see no signs of dental disease at all. We'll evaluate your pet for dental disease and recommend a treatment plan.
